Training Program JHARKHAND Tribal Development Society

The Jharkhand Tribal Development Society (JTDS) is an organization focused on improving the socio-economic conditions of tribal communities in Jharkhand. The society works on various projects aimed at enhancing livelihoods, improving education, and promoting sustainable development among tribal populations.

One of the initiatives under JTDS might involve promoting beekeeping (apiculture) as a sustainable livelihood option. Beekeeping is a viable source of income for tribal communities, especially in regions where agriculture might be challenging due to terrain or climate. The honey produced can be sold locally or in broader markets, and it also plays a role in preserving the local ecosystem by supporting pollination.

If JTDS is promoting beekeeping, the program could involve training in modern beekeeping techniques, providing equipment, or even creating a market link to sell honey products. These initiatives help in generating additional income for tribal families while promoting the conservation of biodiversity
